PAUL WEISS

Nine Basic Arts

"Everyone either directly or indirectly connected with and interested in the arts should read this book, and in and from its study will derive much insight and enjoyment about the world of art."—The New Scholasticism

"Pays a great deal of attention to what artists themselves have had to say about the aims and nature of art."—The Personalist

March, 256 pp., AB 25 $2.25

CHARLES HORTON COOLEY

Social Process. Introduction by Roscoe C. Hinkle

This new edition of Social Process places the classic work in historical perspective, both in relation to the sociology of the period and to the condition and growth of Cooley's conception of society. An introspective and imaginative writer, Cooley put forth definite ideas on what a sociologist should be, on the nature of sociology, and on the sociologists' methodology. The republication of the work and the updating by Mr. Hinkle will make the book necessary ancillary reading to the study of sociological theory and the history of sociology.

March, 496 pp., AB 26 $3.45

Other Arcturus Books Paperbacks

Man's Ultimate Commitment

By Henry N. Wieman. "An inspiring challenge to the many current 'paradoxical' and pessimistic views of man and his historic possibilities."—Journal of Philosophy. AB 1 $1.95

Maintaining Fishes for Experimental and Instructional Purposes

By William M. Lewis. An indispensable reference work for aquarium keepers, professional or amateur. AB 2 $1.45

The Trying-Out of Moby-Dick

By Howard P. Vincent. "What scholarship can do Professor Vincent has done. Melville grows under his touch. The reader who has re-read Moby-Dick in order to be ready to read Professor Vincent's book will be moved to return and re-read Moby-Dick again."—New York Times Book Review. AB 19 $2.45

After the Genteel Tradition: American Writers 1910-1930

Edited by Malcolm Cowley. First published in 1937 and now revised and enlarged, After the Genteel Tradition has become that rare thing among books on our literary history, an American classic. It was—and remains—the only complete study of the rebel generation of American writers who appeared in 1910, won their battle for recognition, and dominated the literary scene during the 1920's.

"A great boon to literary studies."—Choice: Books for College Libraries. AB 20 $1.95

The Human Prospect

By Lewis Mumford. Edited by Karl W. Deutsch and Harry T. Moore. A virtual treasure-house of Mumford, this volume is representative of the man and his work in such varied fields as literature, people, art, philosophy, architecture, and society.

"It would be impossible to catalog the wealth and variety of this man's thought . . . there is no doubt as to its value. Heartily recommended."—Library Journal. AB 21 $2.45

Mexican Journal. The Conquerors Conquered

By Selden Rodman. "It is a welcome addition in our continuing effort to comprehend the ways of our charming, if often baffling, next-door neighbors across the Rio Grande."—New York Times.

"An intimate account of Mexico's rich and complex cultural life today, it is a fresh and absorbing book."—Saturday Review. AB 22 $2.45
